

The Road to Success

The road to success, for women, holds many challenges. I say challenges while I might as easily say distractions. So, in order to achieve success it is important to have a vision or a clear intention and to hold to it through the challenging times; for there will be challenging times. Women who have achieved success before us are models to our success. How? By resisting the messages that dampen their ambitions, messages about the roles they should play in society, and messages that the journey is too hard, these women have tapped into their pioneer spirit, held to vision and achieved their place, their success.

There are many great roles awaiting women – opportunities for us to contribute in ways and places where we have not contributed in the past. The world is crying for our talents, abilities and feminine wisdom. It is up to us reach deep into ourselves to find our pioneering spirit and to step into this place of power and contribute at our highest level.

Are you holding back? If so, where?

What is your greatest unexpressed idea or contribution? Express it to someone close. Become accountable.

Picture yourself having achieved this. Make your first step towards creating this contribution.
